Creator: Indiana University South Bend

Title: School of Arts

Extent: 158 cubic feet

Abstract:

The Indiana University at South Bend Arts Collection documents the IU South Bend Arts programs from early 1960s to the present. The collection includes a variety of materials pertaining to the history and development of the five divisions of the School of the Arts: Music, Theatre, Fine Arts, Speech and Mass Communications. This collection includes audio and video recordings in a variety of formats: photographs, slides, programs, posters, announcements, letters, memos, biographical material (about faculty and staff members of the School) newspaper articles and press releases.

Scope and Content Note:

The collection is organized chronologically. The material begins in 1962 and continues to the present. This collection documents the sizeable contributions that the IU South Bend School of the Arts has made to the community. There are materials that document the productions, performances, and events through the years – and students', faculty, staff, guest artists', and community members' parts in those productions. The Chester String Quartet and The Toradze Piano Studio are a notable part of the collection. Also included are contributions of key leaders of the School of the Arts such as Harold Zisla (of painting), Harold Langland (of sculpture), Tony Droege (of printmaking) and Donald and Gale Griffith (of dance). There is a portion of the collection that includes materials from theatre instructor Warren Pepperdine's materials from a research trip to Bali. The Communication Arts are represented by Speech competitions and forums on contemporary cultural, societal, and political topics. There are materials representing the joint collaboration of the different divisions within the School of the Arts to present the arts to the campus and the community beyond. Some examples include the Tri Cappa Sorority Children's Theatre productions and the collaboration of the Music and Theatre departments to present Opera productions. This collection also documents the deep connections that Indiana University South Bend has had with the community through the years. The connections are related to the events that the campus has partnered with area institutions- including area schools, (especially John Adams High School), the Southhold Dance, South Bend Symphony, South Bend Recorder Society, South Bend Chamber Orchestra, South Bend Youth Symphony, South Bend Boys Choir, Indiana Theatre (A joint effort of Indiana University and the State of Indiana) and the South Bend Civic Opera.

As of March 2017, items from this collection have been removed for the Media Digitization Preservation Initiative and sent to the Indiana University Bloomington campus. The goal of the MDPI project is to take outdated formats of audio and visual materials, such as open-reels, and digitally preserve them. More information on the MDPI project can be found here: <https://mdpi.iu.edu/index.php>. Items removed from this collection include: Open-reel, LP discs, Umatic, Hi-8, VHS, Cassette, CD, and DAT.
