Title: Indiana University South Bend Instructional Media Services Collection

Abstract: The Indiana University South Bend Instructional Media Services Collection is a set of recordings that Instructional Media Services made that document the events, receptions, concerts, and commencements of Indiana University South Bend through the years.

The timeline for this collection spans from 1990 to 2013 with the exception of an item dated to 1963, and also the years 1991, 2004, 2009, and 2011. The origins of the Instructional Media Services begin in 1971 as the “Audiovisual Department”, and over the course of the next twenty years would experience several changes in its structure to become the Instructional Media Services Department of Indiana University South Bend. The media formats contained in this collection range from VHS, CD, DVD, Beta Tape, DVC-Pro, U-Matic VHS, and Cassette Tape.

The items in this collection are mostly concerned with documenting the history of Indiana University South Bend, with full film coverage of many commencements, lectures, and speech nights by the Instructional Media Services Department. There are also several items containing footage, pictures, advertisements, and other media regarding Indiana University South Bend campus and events therein.

Scope and Content Note: The collection material is organized chronologically. Items containing “n.d.” have no discernable date. This collection contains a high volume of commencements, speech nights, and lectures. Concise descriptions are available for some items. The collection contains items ranging from 1963 to 2013.

NOTE:

All VHS, Betacam, and U-Matic tapes in this collection were sent to Indiana University Bloomington for preservation in April 2017 as part of the Media Digitization Preservation Initiative project. All items that have been sent have been given an asterisk below. For more information, visit <https://mdpi.iu.edu/>.
