Abstract:

Indiana University South Bend Women's and Gender Studies Program Collection:

The Indiana University South Bend Women's and Gender Studies Collection is arranged chronologically dating from 1970 to the present. This collection contains many materials that detail a wide variety of issues pertaining to the Women's and Gender Studies Program at Indiana University South Bend. The collection also contains four different newsletters that were published by the Women's and Gender Studies Program at IU South Bend at different times. This collection also houses three boxes of Women's Studies Program course B250 guest speaker lecture audio cassette tapes from March 1977 to April 1989.

Scope and Content Note:

The collection is arranged chronologically from 1970-2015. There are some folders within the collection that are arranged according to subject within chronology.

The Women's and Gender Studies Program at Indiana University South Bend began in the midst of the wider feminist movement of the 1970s. IU South Bend's Women's and Gender Studies Program had a predecessor on campus – the Women's Caucus Committee. The Women's Caucus Committee of IU South Bend addressed the workplace issues women were facing at the time. Women's Caucus Committee of IU South Bend was described in its early documents as “women faculty, concerning ourselves with a variety of problems related to the women in the professions”

One of the main people involved in the Women's and Gender Studies Program from its very beginning was Dr. Gloria Kaufman. In the early stages of the Women's Caucus Committee, Gloria Kaufman used her married (husband's) name of Shapiro. She began to go by the last name of Kaufman by 1972. Kaufman was a professor who taught many of IU South Bend's first women's studies courses. These first courses were put together by the Women's Caucus Committee, and from these courses the Women's Studies Program began to take shape. In October 1979, the Women's Studies Committee made a formal decision to sponsor the Women's Center, which would provide a location for women students, faculty, staff and community members to meet.

The IU South Bend Women's and Gender Studies Program began with its official name omitting the word "Gender". Gender was added to the official department name in 2011 to more adequately reflect its wide focus on not only women, but gender in general.

IU Bloomington Women's Studies Program approved a minor shortly after official application to the IU South Bend administration in December 1979. The Women's Studies Program interdepartmental memos mention that the minor was approved in a memo dating March 1980. The proposal for a Women's Studies Program major came nine years after the approval of the minor. The collection contains memos noting the proposal, which was submitted in November 1989.

The IU South Bend Women's and Gender Studies Program collection provides details on the development of Indiana University South Bend's Women's and Gender Studies Program. This collection contains materials dating from 1970 to the present. These materials address the issues facing the Women's Studies Program, from developing courses to obtaining funding to run the program, among other issues. The Women's Caucus Committee files contain memos discussing a wide variety of issues and concerns relating to women faculty and women students at IU South Bend. It was the Women's Caucus Committee that created the first course in the Women's Studies Program, thus establishing the foundation for today's program.

Cross Reference Note: The IU South Bend Archives has the Collection of Gloria Kaufman who was an English and Women's Studies Professor at IU South Bend (1967-1992) and she was influential in the creation of the IU South Bend's Women's Studies Program. The IU South Bend Archives also has the collection of Eileen Bender who was an IU South Bend Professor of English (1987-2010) and Special Assistant to the Chancellor Associate Director of Academic Affairs Director.
